

WOULD PREVENT THE BOAT RACE

Senate Concurs In Assembly Resolution Relative To Syracuse-Wisconsin Meet.

RADICAL LEGISLATION IS PUT IN

Senate Decides That It Does Not Want To Work On Saturdays--No Change In Senatorial Race As Yet.

Madison, Wis., May 1.—The joint ballot on senator today showed no significant change of leaders, but Congressman Weiss, democrat, and Secretary of State Fear, each got a vote.

Most of the members of the legislature went to Devils lake this afternoon to view the site for the proposed state park.

The senate killed the resolution for Saturday sessions and concurred in the joint resolution proposed by the old soldiers protesting against the Syracuse-Wisconsin crew race and other athletic contests on Memorial Day.

The committee on state affairs offered two radical measures—an anti-cigarette bill which prohibits the use of exhibition of cigarettes, papers or their substitutes in public places, under a fine of twenty-five dollars or ten days in jail, and that saloons be prohibited within three-fourths of a mile of main hall of university and all along state street, the main thoroughfare from the capitol to the university.

The attempt to reconsider the McKenzle bill calling for 25 per cent party vote at the primaries, was unsuccessful by a vote of 58 to 36. The resolution to limit the school age of children to six years, after strong debate, was adopted by a 58 to 29 vote, after motion to reconsider was carried. The bill was engrossed raising the pay of justice court jurors from a half to one dollar a day.

MARITIME EXPOSITION INTERNATIONAL EVENT

Fair At Bordeaux Commemorates Hundredth Anniversary Of Steam's Application To Navigation.

Bordeaux, May 1.—The international maritime exposition, for which preparations have been in progress for more than a year, was formally opened today with fitting ceremonies. The closing date will be October 31. The exposition is intended fittingly to commemorate the successful application of steam to navigation a hundred years ago and in this connection the exposition is of special interest to the United States. The motive for holding the celebration in Bordeaux is found in the fact that in 1803, four years before Fulton's successful attempt on the Hudson with the first steamboat, he made his initial essays in steam navigation on the River Loire near here.

The exposition is housed in a number of handsome buildings erected on the great square of the "Quinconces," facing the River Garonne. The history of navigation from the earliest times is graphically illustrated by the various displays. The collection of exhibits embraces models of every kind of ship, ancient and modern, commercial and naval, together with an illustrated display of all that pertains to ocean geography and to river and sea navigation.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, May 1, 1907.—Another New Church.—We learn that the colored society of this city, after repeated trials, have at last secured a lot for their new church and, as soon as the necessary papers can be executed, will go about the work of building. The lot is situated on the West Side, on Franklin street, next south of the New England House. It was purchased of the executors of the estate of Nathaniel Parker, deceased. Considering how recently this society has been organized, they have made truly commendable progress, and we trust before another winter they will have the satisfaction of worshipping in their own house. They deserve the aid and encouragement of their Christian brethren in the other churches.

Five hundred thousand acres of public land have been located in Wisconsin with the Agricultural College land scrip.

A California paper thinks that fifty years from now there will be as much trade and ship building in Puget Sound as on the coast of Maine.

A General Tree Ordinance.—At the meeting of the Common Council, last evening a general tree ordinance was passed, which makes its obligatory of every lot owner to plant shade trees in front of his lot or lots, when ever he is notified by the Aldermen to do so. While in some instances this law might work a hardship (and what law does not?) in the end it will prove of incalculable advantage to the property owners themselves and to the city at large. We can think of no possible way in which the beauty of the city can be so substantially enhanced as the liberal planting of shade trees. We note in favor of the ordinance.

Before The Footlights.

The great German dialect comedian, interesting, lies the romance of Sidney and golden-voiced singer, Al. H. Wilson, in his new play, "Metz in the Alps," which the attraction at the Myers theatre Thursday, May 2.

RESCUE

AL. H. WILSON IN "METZ IN THE ALPS," HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

Under the bright skies and snow-clad peaks of Switzerland on the banks of historic Lake Geneva among people of a sturdy and hearty race as ever lived, whose history and tradition team with romance of rare charm, and whose picturesque beauty is truly in its art, a star, Mr. Al. H. Wilson, who has reached the topmost rung of his fame by his magnificence and rare ability as an artist, as well as by the use of his wonderful singing voice. The young man in question, aside from his musical talents, is an actor of more than ordinary capabilities, and in the role of Metz Muller, a young German Swiss, will no doubt, win as much fame and fortune as did the other great German dialect comedian, "Fritz Emmett," of undying memory.

"Metz in the Alps" itself is of that touching, tender, home-loving kind that reaches for that well spring of emotions—the heart, and grasping it firmly, leaves none but the most pleasant memories behind. The company which Manager Ellis has selected to support Mr. Wilson is composed of players, well and favorably known to the votaries of the theatre. The scenic embellishments will be most sumptuous rivaling in grandeur and picturesqueness, those of any on the stage. The costuming will be magnificent, pleasing to the ladies and thoroughly correct as to locale and time of the story. During the action of the play, Mr. Wilson will sing several new songs, each of which is a gem of beauty and exquisite melody.

Myron B. Rice submits his splendid production of the late Frederic Rankin and A. Baldwin Sloan's faithful fairytale, "The Gingerbread Man," at the Myers theatre Saturday, May 4, matinee and evening.

"The Gingerbread Man" is a beautiful, pretty and amusing musical comedy and it contains excellent novelities in the way of chorals, lighting schemes and stage business. The scenes of the play are laid in Santa Claus land, and afterwards on the dividing line between the realms of King Sugar Plum and King Bunn. The plot is fanciful and it tells of what became of the sugar plum, which Little Jack Horner took out of the Christmas pudding. In reality the plum was a beautiful princess, the daughter of King Sugar Plum, who has been thus transformed by an evil genius, and it follows the adventures of Little Jack Horner in an effort to recover his lost sweetheart.

And yet "The Gingerbread Man" although it appeals strongly to the youngsters, who see the characters of their story-books moving about on the stage, is distinctly suited to adult tastes. Into these fairylike kingdoms come a host of grotesque and picturesque characters, who are well supplied with modern jokes, funny dances, handsome costumes and beautiful catchy music.

The prima donna of the company is Miss Mildred Elrine, well known on the American stage for her startling beauty and splendid figure. She makes a handsome and vivacious boy as Little Jack Horner and her duet with Miss Madge Lawrence as "Maxie," and in the second act her song, "Moon, Moon, Moon," never fails to make a hit. Another catchy song of the play is "John Dough," sung by Fred J. Nice, who portrays the title role, that of "The Gingerbread Man." Willard Louis, formerly with Henry W. Saavge's Grand Opera company, plays the part of Machavalus Prince. Lutevohman as King Bunn and Joseph Kearney as "Wondrous Wise" are extremely funny. Others prominent in the cast are Harry Bond, Irving Newhoff, George Hoey, Jr., Corinne Frances, etc.

Wine Without Grapes.

The Bavarian winemaker who fabricated 55,000 gallons of wine in one year by means of chemicals, without a drop of grape juice, is one of many similarly engaged who deserve the punishment of imprisonment and fine which he alone gets. Within seven years 300 tons of glycerine have been used by this dealer, it seems, making wine, besides citric and tartaric acids. No wonder that, with such a beverage, the bibulous Bavarian gets extremely "tight," almost to the point of explosion.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

WORK ONLY FOR EXERCISE.

"When the industrial system shall prevail what we advocate, every adult male will have the right and will be able to retire upon reaching the age of 42. If any man shall work for twenty-one years but four hours a day and only 100 days in a year, he will have done enough work to represent a fortune of $10,000 under the present system. This amount of work is only healthy exercise, and yet that is all that need be done. Even this small amount of work is more than some of the beneficiaries of the capitalist perform. The new order of things will give them a chance for the same healthy exercise."

This paragraph was taken from an address delivered to an organized labor audience in Milwaukee, the other night, by Daniel De Leon, the famous socialist leader of New York.

He denounced labor unionists as scabs and told them that they were responsible for the failure of strikes, because they failed to stand together, arguing that when one industry was called out, that union workers in all other industries should strike in sympathy.

The socialistic order which he represents is known as the "industrial workers of the world," and the plan which they are attempting to carry out is to enlist all wage earners of every class, and by the force of numbers and public sentiment, reduce the capitalist class to the ranks of labor.

When this is done, and property equally distributed there will be a general division of all kinds of work. Public utilities, as well as private enterprise will belong to the people. The average work day for everybody will be four hours for 100 days in the year, just enough for healthy exercise, while the other 265 days will be devoted to recreation and pleasure.

The railroads will belong to the people and everybody can ride without expense. There will be no crowded cities, for people can live in the country and ride back and forth at pleasure.

There will be a constant change of occupation to relieve monotony and make everything equal. The men in the office will spend four hours a day at his desk for a month, and then change places with the man with a hoe.

When this golden utopia is ushered in, every man and woman will retire at the age of 42 with a $10,000 bank account, and the next 40 years will be one continuous holiday where "nobody works but father," and he simply can't stop, because he is a victim of habit.

Reads like a fairy tale, don't it? But that's what we're coming to.

PROHIBITION IN KANSAS.

The following dispatch from Leavenworth, Kansas, is significant: "It was announced today that all the beer agents, those not named in the recent supreme court injunction included, will quit business here, and it is believed by many that there will be no open saloons in Leavenworth by the end of the week. Judge Garver and Judge Allen, the receivers, took possession of the five buildings supposed to be owned by the Schlitz Brewing company Saturday. The property is valued at $50,000. Two wholesale liquor houses have removed their stock.

The saloon property of brewers, all over the state, is now in the hands of a receiver, and border cities like Leavenworth are not exempt. This temperance movement in Kansas is not political, and there is no Carrie Nation fireworks connected with it. Public sentiment throughout the state has crystallized on the enforcement of law and order, and under the direction of the Anti-Saloon league, which is working so effectively in the south and west, the saloon is being held to strict account. The results of this aggressive campaign are being felt in other states, and many of them are on the verge of prohibition, not because of fanatical sentiment, but because of a determined and united effort to enforce the law.

Wisconsin is on the list and within the next five years the rural districts will bar the traffic because of local option sentiment, while the cities throughout the state will demand the rigid enforcement of regulatory ordinances. This is not a spasmodic reform. The movement is in response to an awakened conscience, intelligently directed, and it will increase in strength and volume until it dominates.

The legislature may decide to test the "Mary Ann" feature, in their efforts to elect a senator. This provides for a first and second choice, and means that a voter votes this cast can be counted as first choice votes. A sort of "novel" see it and now you don't," recommended by the late governor as an amendment to the primary law.

The weather is favorable for prolonged legislation—plenty of snow in the north woods and nothing doing on the farm in the southern part of the state. There is no occasion for undue haste in electing a senator. Uncle like is taking on experiences every day, and at his time of life he should be let down easy. The other candidates are not liable to nervous prostration, unless one of them happens to be elected!

Milwaukee is about the only western city to suffer from May Day labor disturbances. A speedy adjustment is to be hoped for. This is a poor time to strike. If President J. J. Hill's forecast is reliable there will be time to rest without striking in less than a twelvemonth. He predicts that there will be two jobs for every three men within a reasonably short time. This will provide a holiday without necessitating a strike.

The peasants of south France have discovered the art of satisfying their needs without being influenced by their wants. The average family of five persons is said to live on four cents a day for food products. It is needless to say that they all have bank accounts, and plenty of pocket money.

Fifteen dollars per month—30 yen—is considered good wages in Japan. On this amount many families are supported. An income tax is collected of every man who earns more than $150 a year. America possesses some advantage not fully appreciated.

Secretary Taft has declared himself as a presidential candidate, and the fight in Ohio promises to be interesting. Foraker and Dick are in control of the state party organization, but Taft has the president behind him.

There is no back door to the public drinking fountain, and the council should see to it that they are provided with cups. It is just possible that some people are discovering that water was made to drink.

Good sleighing, May 1st, is reported from the northern part of the state. Winter is flirting in the "lap of spring," and the green grass under the snow, is patiently waiting for a chance to blush.

Governor Cummins of Iowa aspires to be the candidate for vice-president. He will do a good deal of perspiring before his hopes are realized.

It is estimated that Italy produces two million acres of olives annually. That beats the American tobacco crop by several points.

Under the auspices of the Presbyterian church a very interesting and diversified program of readings and music was given in the Y. M. C. Possessed of a sweet musical voice, clear yet not sharp and powerful but not boisterous, she was equal to the variety of her offerings. Her oratorical ability is enhanced by a wonderful command of dialects and humorous pieces were interspersed with the serious. Mrs. Lemmon was assisted by Mrs. John Rexford and the Janesville Symphony orchestra, under the direction of D. D. Bennett. The program that was presented is as follows:

Wisconsin Engineer, Predicts Flood Will Sweep Entire Course of Stream.

J. C. Montgomery, a hydraulic engineer of some prominence in the state, has just completed a careful survey and thorough examination of the Rock River, Lake Koshkonong, and its immediate vicinity. His real work has been about the source of the river, and what he has to say relative to the possibility of a flood sweeping down the river and deluging the adjacent valley is of considerable importance.

Montgomery is particularly prepared to point out such an error, owing to the building across the river, of piling stores on both the Milwaukee and Court street bridge. The same is true of Beloit. Mr. Montgomery does not think his predictions are definite, or irrefutable, but he is sure they will happen some day.

Montgomery has been engaged in his line of work for a central Wisconsin for the past twelve years and is regarded as an authority on all phases of the hydraulic engineering.

For some time past Mr. Montgomery has devoted his attention to the study of the conditions existing in the Rock River valley, and he is now staying here for a short time, that are of interest to the citizens of Janesville.

According to observations made by Montgomery, conditions are such that the Wisconsin lakes, that are an overflow of Rock river, are expected in the course of time, as the direct result of peculiar circumstances existing in the six or eight miles of land lying between Lake Koshkonong and the chain of lakes extending southward from Madison and in which Rock river finds a source.

There is perhaps no section of the country that can compare with this particular stretch of which Mr. Montgomery speaks, and owing to the remarkable strata in the construction of the earth at this point, there is an indication that within a few short years, the restraining divide that separates Lake Koshkonong and Rock river will give way, precipitating an immense volume of water in the stream. The result can be easily foreseen. Lake Koshkonong, at its water level, stands nearly one hundred feet higher than the high water level of Rock river at this point and the precipitation of such an immense amount of water would have most disastrous effects upon the valley of Rock river.

There is practically no uniform strata of any considerable strength in the divide between the lake and the river and the material that does form it is rapidly losing its strength of resistance, showing a tendency to sink, as though reposing on a bed of quicksand.

This fact alone, in itself is a danger and there is no possible means known to dam the overflow, should a break once occur.

Eventually, of course, such a catastrophe would be of great benefit to the future of the Mississippi valley, opening as it would a water course to the great thoroughfare, the Mississippi, but primarily, the results would be far-reaching in their significance.

Many more section workers laid off.

Foremen on Prairie du Chien Division of St. Paul Road Allowed but One Helper.

By an order which took effect this morning a large number of section hands were laid off indefinitely by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company. Every foreman on the Prairie du Chien division was commanded to reduce his force to one helper. This means that from two to six or seven men were thrown out of work on every section. It is very likely that the order will be extended to other divisions, the company having planned to reduce their forces on middle western lines to a minimum in order that all energies may be exerted toward the completion of the Pacific extension before next winter.

By the Formation of State Association Janesville Auto Owners Now Belong to the A. A. A.

Janesville automobile owners who are members of the Janesville club and who, through this association are members of the state organization, are now eligible to the American Automobile association, the Wisconsin organization having been admitted to membership. The executive meeting was held in New York and state associations from Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Maryland, and Missouri were elected to membership. A chairman F. B. Howe of the touring board reported the advisability of a touring run and offered a cup for this event, which was accepted by the executive committee. Chairman Charles T. Terry of the legation board reported the end of the year of his board in securing favorable action for the motor vehicle bill, and a serious objection has been made to any of the provisions of the association's federal motor vehicle bill, proposed for registration, and therefore, the proposed statute will go before the joint committee of this house of representatives and be favorably reported before the house itself without a session, as yet so far as reports have been received to date, he said.

University Offers Course of Instruction in Mechanics by Mail to Those Who Wish It.

Young Janesville mechanics and shop workers with limited means have a most remarkable opportunity offered them for both a theoretical and practical instruction in their line of work at a small cost. The University of Wisconsin offers instruction by mail in practical courses and then opens its great shops in Madison to artisans during the six weeks beginning June 24th. At that time, the same instructors who give the correspondence courses will not only give their students further instruction by lecture and text-book, but will put them at solid work a few hours a day, under supervision, at lathes, planers, milling and drilling machines, shapers at vise and bench, with hammer, chisel, and file. There will also be practical work in the steam and gas laboratory and the electrical department. This combination of opportunity to get the theory of mechanics with the chance to prove the theory and to get manual skill under the best conditions, will give hundreds of ambitious workers in Wisconsin a splendid opportunity. Full information will be cheerfully given upon application to the university extension department, at Madison, Wisconsin.

Spring Weather Is Not Up to Standard.

Report From the Government Station in Milwaukee Is Slightly Discouraging.

While May has been ushered in by milder weather than in the past week the advent of real spring appears now to be advanced as far as is usual in March. In the immediate vicinity of Janesville the farmers have done but little toward their spring plowing and few fields are ready for the crops. Complaints have been heard that the small grains already in the ground were not getting a good start. However, with a good warm May followed by a fairly good summer the damage to the crops by lateness in planting will not affect Janesville exceedingly. The state report given out yesterday for the first time this season, is as follows:

The first of the season's crop reports for Wisconsin has been issued by J. H. Kibbel, official temporarily in charge. Who says that the winter ended abruptly during the last week in February, and March temperatures were well above the normal in all sections of the state. Spring seemed to be making a sure and decided advance, especially when the highest March temperature ever recorded in the state occurred near the end of the month. The precipitation, though slightly deficient, was well distributed and generally sufficient for vegetation. Falling temperature occurred at the end of the month, and since that time the weather has been cool and dry. The first three days of the last week were cool and pleasant, with moderate temperatures. On Wednesday rain began in the southern part of the state, and snow in the north. By Thursday morning from four to six inches of snow had fallen over the northern portion, but it soon melted. The week closed with precipitation falling in all sections, and in amounts sufficient to carry the total for the week well above the normal. The mean temperature for the last week has been from 5 to 10 degrees below the normal, and freezing temperatures have occurred every morning except those of the 22d and 23d. The lowest temperature reported was 15 degrees, at Koenigsberg, on the 20th and 24th, and the highest, 60 degrees, at Portage, on the 22d.

THE CAT THAT REASONED.

Family Pet Made the Best of Unfavorable Situation.

"Talking about the ability of animals to reason," said a citizen, "you ought to see my wife's cat. He is a spoiled beast, and in the evening when the family is sitting about the lamp, no objection is made to his jumping up on the table and walking around to be petted. But one thing he has learned by dint of several good whippings is that he must never get up on the table when it is spread for a meal. Well, one night recently when we came home from the theater we decided to have a little supper, and my wife spread a cloth over the end of the table. The cat just then entered the room. Walking to the table he was about to jump up when he caught sight of the white cloth over one end. It was plain that he was puzzled. First he went to the end that had no cloth, hesitated, and then returned to look at the end that contained the cloth. My wife and I stood still to watch him, and we had no doubt that he was assuring himself that the cloth was really there. At length he jumped up on a chair by the table so as to survey its top. The half of the table at which he sat was free from the cloth and finally the very cautiously climbed up on the table and slowly crossing over to the half which contained the cloth, sat down at the very edge."

ENTOMBED MINERS ARE FOUND ALIVE

TWO RESCUERS REACH THEM THROUGH THE WATER.

WILD JOY AT THE SHAFT

Seven Men, Imprisoned Since Friday Noon, Too Weak to Bring Out Until Mine Is Drained.

Johnstown, Pa., May 1.—After being entombed since last Friday noon in the Berwind White Coal company mine No. 38, at Foustwell, near here, the seven miners who were shut off from the world by a sudden rush of water, caused by the breaking of a wall of an abandoned mine, were rescued at ten ten o'clock Tuesday night.

The men were greatly exhausted. Owing to their weakened condition it was decided not to bring them out until after the mine had been drained.

Never in the history of the mining region has such a joyous scene been witnessed as when the unfortunate men were reached. Hundreds of people, who gathered about watching the work of rescue cheered, laughed and cried.

Reached by Two Volunteers.

The men were reached at ten o'clock by Stiney Rodon and Charles Ream, who made a dash through 50 feet of water-filled heading. Earlier in the day John Boyla, a brother of one of the imprisoned men, and three comrades made a futile attempt to reach the seven. These men came back half drowned and reported that portions of the heading were still completely filled with water and that more pumping would have to be done before the men could be reached. The efforts at pumping were then redoubled.

At ten o'clock the water had so far gone down that it was resolved to make one more attempt to break through to the overcast where it was believed the unfortunate men were still alive.

Stiney Rodon and Charles Ream volunteered for the service.

Over an hour elapsed before either man was heard from, and then Ream came swimming back through the heading, bringing the first news from the imprisoned seven. The effort had nearly exhausted Ream. He reported that the seven men were alive and all in good shape, but that until more pumping was done the passage to the place where they had taken refuge was impossible to those who could not swim.

Boyla Saved the Party.

Ream and his comrade carried to the imprisoned men simply a flask of brandy and a little water. He reported that Mike Boyla, since the breaking of the walls between the abandoned workings, had been in charge of the movements of his comrades. Boyla, who was a mine contractor, was acquainted with every turn of the mine. When the flood broke out, according to the story he told Ream, he led his comrades to the highest point in the heading.

Under Boyla's direction, each man before fleeing, seized his lunch basket. When they arrived at the overcast every lamp but one was extinguished and one by one the lamps were burned out until, when they were reached by Rodon and Ream, there was but a single light remaining.

Terrible Darkness and Noise.

Boyla stated that the lamps were burned because the darkness, and the noise of the water rushing in the headings as it was driven back and forth by the expansion of air cushions, caused by the flood, were so terrifying that the men feared that their reason would leave them if left in darkness.

When stock was taken of the available supply of provisions it was found that three baskets were but half emptied. The scanty store of rations lasted until Monday morning, since when the men had nothing to eat. During the whole time they were imprisoned they had gone without water, fearing to drink the water from the abandoned workings.

Ream stated that at the place where the men had sought refuge there had been a supply of ties left for track laying purposes. With these Boyla and his comrades had built a platform upon which they sought refuge and when found there they were not only high but dry.

BLOOD POISON CURE YOURSELF AT HOME

Contagious Blood Poison begins in the most insignificant way, and with less evidence of what is to follow, than any other disease. The first symptom is usually a little sore or blister, whose appearance does not indicate that deeper down, in the blood, a treacherous and deadly poison has found its way to corrupt and vitiate the entire circulation, and later to disease the body with the most loathsome and hateful symptoms. Unless one has experienced or witnessed the terrible results of Contagious Blood Poison, no idea of its effects can be formed.

When the blood has become fully inoculated with the virus, the mouth and throat ulcerate; glands in the neck and groin swell, and sometimes burst, forming ulcers; the hair comes out; copper colored spots appear on the body; and where the disease is allowed to remain in the system it penetrates deeper and deeper, until it affects the bones, causing them to decay, and makes a complete physical wreck of its unfortunate victim.

Not only the first one who contracts the disease must suffer, but it is transmitted through the blood from generation to generation, and innocent lives are blighted and diseased by this monster poison. No other disease is so highly contagious as blood poison, in the most trivial manner it may be contracted by innocent persons. Many have been inoculated with the virus, and suffered the disastrous and destructive effects of the poison, by a friendly handshake, or by using the same tableware or toilet articles, or handling the clothing of an infected person.

Strong mineral medicines like mercury and potash are often given to cure Contagious Blood Poison, but years of failure have proven that such treatment cannot cure the trouble. These medicines can only mask or shut the disease up in the system for awhile; as soon as they are left off the symptoms return in all their hideousness, and the sufferer finds he has wasted valuable time, and, in addition, ruined his health with these harmful drugs.

S. S. S. is the antidote for Contagious Blood Poison—the only remedy that is able to get at the root of the disease and force out every particle of the poison, so that there are never any signs of its return. It can be used and a perfect cure of the disease made in the privacy of your own home. Sufferers from this disease can be their own doctors, and the forty years of cures made by this remedy assures them that the treatment is in every respect the proper one, and that its use, together with any suggestions as to local treatment, which will be furnished by our physicians free of charge, will cure the trouble permanently and privately.

S. S. S. is made entirely of purifying, healing roots, herbs and barks. We offer a reward of $1,000 for proof that it contains a particle of mineral in any form. S. S. S. goes down to the very root of the trouble, and by driving out the last trace of the poison, and making the blood pure and strong, cures the disease thoroughly and with certainty. S. S. S. will also remove the effects of any mineral treatment that may have been previously used.

S.S.S.

CONTAINS NO MINERAL

It contains instructions for the different stages of the disease, and also advice about the local treatment that will be the most helpful in effecting a cure. This book, together with any special medical advice desired, will be sent free by our physicians, to all who write.

Enlarging Your Business

If you are in business and you want to make more money you will read every word we have to say. Are you spending your money for advertising in hazardous fashion as if intended for charity, or do you advertise for direct results?

Did you ever stop to think how your advertising can be made a source of profit to you, and how its value can be measured in dollars and cents. If you have not, you are throwing money away.

Advertising is a modern business necessity, but must be conducted on business principles. If you are not satisfied with your advertising you should set aside a certain amount of money to be spent annually, and then carefully note the effect it has in increasing your volume of business; whether a 10, 20 or 30 per cent increase. If you watch this gain from year to year you will become intensely interested in your advertising, and how you can make it enlarge your business.

If you try this method we believe you will not want to let a single issue of this paper go to press without something from your store.

We will be pleased to have you call on us, and we will take pleasure in explaining our annual contract for so many inches, and how it can be used in whatever amount that seems necessary to you.

If you can sell goods over the counter we can also show you why this paper will best serve your interests when you want to reach the people of this community.

HOW LAJOIE STARTED

Greatest Ball Player Signed First Contract on Back of Envelope.

SALARY WAS $100 A MONTH.

Charles Marston of Fall River, Mass., Was Discoverer of the "Frenchman" Who Could Hit a Ball a Mile—His Story.

The first baseball contract that Napoleon Lajoie of the Cleveland Indians ever signed was written on the back of a common envelope and called for Larry's services for the sum of $100 a month.

The story of how Lajoie broke into the professional game was told recently by Charles Marston of Fall River, Mass.

Back in January, 1890, Marston, then manager of the Fall River club, and Selee, then managing the Boston Nationals, dropped into the office of the sporting editor of the Boston Herald.

A few other baseball men were there, including Woodcock, who was once a star pitcher at Brown university.

"I know of a good batter," replied Woodcock. "I don't know his name, but he is a big Frenchman that lives down at Woonsocket. I call myself a pretty fair pitcher, but I haven't anything that he cannot hit all over the field. I can't get the ball past the plate."

NAPOLEON LAJOIE.

As they left Selee rather discouraged Marston in going after Larry. Marston, however, could not get Woodcock's tip out of his mind, and the next morning he went down to Woonsocket.

He did not know the name of the man that he was going for, but when he reached the town of shoes he made inquiries at the depot, but without success. Next he visited a newspaper office, but there he did not seem to know whom he meant.

Finally he stepped into a cafe, and when he said he was after a big Frenchman who could hit a ball a mile he was told that he must mean Larry Lajoie.

He next went to where Larry was employed, and then he was summoned. Marston had neglected to take a contract with him, but an envelope was brought into use, and the greatest ball player that ever lived signed up on that.

"I asked him where he wanted to play," continued Marston, "and he said he wanted to play second. As I had a good second baseman, however, I told him that there was no chance, and he replied that he could play any place except pitch."

As between the major and minor leagues, opportunities are not all on one side. Not only do the major leagues offer chances for men of the minor leagues, but the minors frequently present openings for major league players to make a good livelihood. Among noted former big league performers filling managerial berths in the minor leagues are Jesse Burkett, Joe Kelley, Ducky Holmes, Jack Dunn, Jack Doyle, Park Wilson, Malachi Kittredge and Hugh Duffy.

The gross exaggeration of the size of baseball crowds has already started in. The national game draws well enough without inflating attendances. However, it is not the only sport in which the attendances often are bigger on paper than they are in reality. Football attendances are more nearly correctly estimated than those of any other sport.

Ball players are claimed to be the most negligent of training rules of any body of athletes. Cigar smoking and tobacco chewing are common, and they are not noted for temperate eating or early hours.

Olga Nethersole's New Play.
Olga Nethersole recently in Chicago produced for the first time in America "The Awakening," an English translation of Paul Hervey's "Le Reveil." The play is a drama full of exciting action laid in modern Paris. It was produced with elaborate scenic effect. Miss Nethersole assumed the role of Therese de Mege and got much applause. Frank Mills, Charles A. Stevenson and Julien Royce also were received well.

THE ROUNDUP COLUMN.

Willie West Is Not Yet Through Talking About the Sports.

I see that Joe Ullman, bookmaker and backer of a theatrical company, has become afflicted with brain trouble. No wonder. Either one of the games he was mixed up with is enough to soften a man's drink works.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

In his first game of the season for the New York Nationals the once great pitcher Joe McGinnity and veteran "Iron Man" twirled much after the manner of a fair baby. The iron man was a bit rusty.

Not in a kidding spirit, but we would like for the purpose of identification that when the newspapers speak of a "prominent horseman" they would designate saddle or shafts. We have waded through many stories only to find at the end that the "prominent horseman" mentioned in the headlines owed the distinction and designation to once having owned a sore stallion with a mark of 2-2-6.

John J. McGraw started training for his verbal campaign at New Orleans. According to Umpire Zimmerman, Mugsy displayed good vocabulary form.

Battling Nelson has bought forty acres near the place once called Hoge-wich, Ill. Gang appears to be more interested in acres than acres.

"E was thoroughly going," was Jack Palmer, but the climate slowed 'im up."

The matching of Peter Maher and Marvin Hart for April 1 at Hot Springs was appropriate.

Joseph Morlarity of Worcester, Mass., is the author of a humorous poem on the great Napoleon Lajoie of the Cleveland team, who balls from Woonsocket, R. I., and the Worcester man made a great hit at the social sessions of the Binks and Eagles in Norwich, Conn., on a recent night when he recited the composition. It is in French dialect and is as clever an article as has been turned out on the only Nap. The poem is as follows:

MA LAZ-U-A.

Or One Game by One Fan From One Socket—Boston Versus Cleveland.
Louis Dosquet, bats ma nain.
An I tak to saw dose baseball galm.
An wen de Cleveland calm to play
Dats de three ma holiday.

Fife thousand fans shees on de ground
Shees cheer for Boston all around!
An tra to make dose Boston play
To make the win from Laz-u-a.

The galm shees play for hour or more,
An Selee's malk dose Boston sore,
An I be happy—hurry! hurry!
An I malk the cheer for Laz-u-a.

Do nump shees one big bluff.
An Nap, shee ain't afraid, shee give her

An fas, ba gad, jua lak eel
Nap was malk one baze steel.
An de crowd was roar put dose peecher

Ba gad, Laz-u-a, shees de goods!
Do next to bat shees Harry Bay.
An he clinch de galm for Laz-u-a.
An how I'm lumpy, every day.
Because shees French, ma Laz-u-a.

CHEER UP, MY GOOD WOMAN, YOUR HUSBAND HAS THE BASEBALL FEVER, IT'S NOT SERIOUS.

DOCTOR, I'M SO WORRIED ABOUT MY HUSBAND, HE'S LOSING HIS SLEEP AND WHEN HE DOES SLEEP HE HOWLS AND GROANS SO.

Probably if the club owners had not shouted so much about the profits of last season the ball players would not now be holding out for fabulous salaries.

Talk of Cuts in Pay of Players Has No Foundation.

THE CAREER OF FRANK ISBELL.

Great Chicago American Second Baseman Began as a Pitcher in 1896 For St. Paul (Minn.) Club—He Has Played All Positions.

After all that has been said and done and threatened there is no immediate danger of an alarming slashing of baseball salaries. Not even the great American game can be made so absolute a trust that a man can be kept long on a $3,000 salary by one club when another is willing and anxious to pay him $4,900.

Moreover, the magnates are not fools. They know how powerful a magnet in wheeling the dollars into the box office is the knowledge of the fans that there are men on the club's payroll who are paid as high as $50 a game. A club whose salary list is known to be $60,000 a year is more than twice as alluring an attraction as one that pays out only $30,000.

There is no sense and less argument in the assertion millions of times reiterated that a ball player who commands $6,000 or $8,000 a season couldn't earn $10 a week at anything else. There are singers who are paid $1,000 a night, and there are artists who get $5,000 or $10,000 for a single painting, who couldn't earn their board by any other means. That they do get big money shows that they are letter perfect in their part and are worthy of their hire.

The ball player who is worth a fancy salary will generally get it. The prosperous club owners of the major leagues could adopt no surer method of putting the goose with golden egg laying habit out of business forever than by ruthlessly slashing the salaries of the men who have lifted the game to the amazing standard of popularity it now occupies.

Frank Isbell, the famous second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, was born in Delavan, N. Y., on Aug. 21, 1875, and moved to Minnesota when a boy. He has been with Comiskey most of his baseball career, playing every position on the diamond at different times. He began as a pitcher and joined the St. Paul club in the fall of 1896. He pitched and played the outfield there for two years, until he was drafted by the Chicago Nationals for the season of 1898. He remained on the West Side team until August, 1898, when he was returned to St. Paul, finishing the season in the outfield.

He went to Chicago with Comiskey's club in 1900 and developed into a first baseman, then into a great utility player and finally into the club's regular second baseman. He throws right handed and bats left handed.

The owners of the Cleveland club of the American league are taking no chances on sustaining a loss through the team being crippled in a railroad accident and have insured the players for an amount a trifle over $100,000. Many of the other big league clubs are thus insured, but it is believed that none is insured for a larger amount. Ever since the Naps were in an accident at Napoleon, O., the magnates have taken no chances, and before the start of the training trip every player was fixed so that the club will be protected financially in case he meets with an accident on the baseball field throughout the baseball season.

When Charley Hickman went to New York in 1899, the great and only Amos Rusie, the recognized king of pitchers, was throwing his cannon ball curves in so marvelous a manner that the opposing batters were made to look like so many frigid tumbrels. Hickman, sitting on the bench watching the great Amos at work, was a study in repose, but he wasn't asleep by any means, for after awhile he turned to Van Halgren and slowly remarked:

"That fellow Rusie has got something great hidden up his sleeve."

"And what's that?" quickly asked Van.

"His arm," dreamily replied Charley.

A MAKER OF HISTORY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM,
Author of "The Master Mummer," "A Prince of Sinners," "Mysterious Mr. Sablin," "Anna the Adventuress," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by LITTLE, BROWN, and COMPANY.

It was the young lady from Vienna. She was dressed in a wonderful demit-toilet of white lace, and she wore a large picture hat adjusted at exactly the right angle for her profile. From her throat and bosom there flashed the sparkle of many gems. The finger which held her cigarette was ablaze with diamonds. She leaned back in her seat smoking lazily, and she met Phyllis' furtive gaze with almost insolent coldness. But a moment later, when M. Alfred's back was turned, she leaned forward and addressed her rapidly.

"A man will come here," she said, "who could tell you if he was willing all that you seek to know. He will come tonight. He comes all the nights. You will see I hold my handkerchief so in my right hand. When he comes I shall drop it—so."

"The girl's swift speech, her half fearful glances toward the door, puzzled Phyllis.

"Can you not come nearer to me, and talk?" she asked.

"No. You must not speak to me again. You must not let any one, especially the man himself, know what I have told you. No more now. Watch for the handkerchief."

"But what shall I say to him?" The girl took no notice of her. She was looking in the opposite direction. She seemed to have edged away as far as possible from her. Phyllis drew a long breath. She felt her heart beating with excitement. The place suddenly seemed to her like part of a nightmare. And then all was clear again. Fortune was on her side. The secret of Guy's disappearance was in this room, and a few careless words from the girl at the next table had told her more than an entire police system had been able to discover. But why the mystery? What was she to say to the man when he came? The girl from Vienna was talking to some friends and trying carelessly with a little morsel of lace which she had drawn from her bosom. Phyllis watched it with the eyes of a cat. Every now and then she watched also the door.

The place was much fuller now. Mlle. Flossie had arrived with a small company of friends from Maxim's. The music was playing all the time. The popping of corks was almost incessant. The volume of sound had swelled. The laughter and greeting of friends betrayed more abandon than earlier in the evening. Old acquaintances had been renewed and new ones made. Mademoiselle from Vienna was surrounded by a little circle of admirers. Still she held in her right hand a crumpled up little ball of lace.

Men passing down the room tried to attract the attention of the beautiful young English demoiselle who looked out upon the little scene so indifferently as regarded individuals and yet with such eager interest as a whole. No one was bold enough, however, to make a second effort. Necessity at times gives birth to a swift capacity. Fresh from her simple country life, Phyllis found herself still able with effortless serenity to confound the most hardened boulevardier who paused to ogle her. Her eyes and lips expressed with ease the most convincing and absolute indifference to their approaches. A man may sometimes brave anger, he rarely has courage to combat indifference. So Phyllis held her own and waited.

And at last the handkerchief fell. Phyllis felt her own heart almost stop beating as she gazed down the room. A man of medium height, dark, immaculately dressed, distinguished, was slowly approaching her, exchanging greetings on every side. His languid, crooked smile upon Phyllis. Those who had watched her previously saw then a change. The cold indifference had vanished from her face. She leaned forward as though anxious to attract his attention. She succeeded easily enough.

He was almost opposite her table, and her half smile seemed to leave him but little choice. He touched the back of the chair which fronted hers and took off his hat.

"Mademoiselle permits?" he asked softly.

"But certainly," she answered, "it is for you whom I have been waiting."

"Mademoiselle flatters me," he murmured, more than a little astonished.

"Not in the least," she answered. "I have been waiting to ask you what has become of my brother, Guy Poynton."

"He drew out the chair and seated himself. His eyes never left her face.

"Mademoiselle," he murmured, "this is most extraordinary."

She noticed then that his hands were trembling.

CHAPTER V.

I AM asking a great deal of you, George! I know it. But you see how helpless I am. And read the letter—read it for yourself!"

He passed Phyllis' letter across the small round dining table. His guest took it and read it carefully through.

"How old is the young lady?" he asked.

"Twenty-three."

"And the boy?"

"Twenty-one."

"Orphans, I think you said?"

"Orphans and relationless."

"Well off?"

"Moderately."

Duncombe leaned back in his chair and slipped his port thoughtfully.

"It is an extraordinary situation," he remarked.

"Extraordinary, indeed," his friend assented. "But so far as I am concerned you can see how I am fixed. I am older than either of them, but I have always been their nearest neighbor and their most intimate friend. I ever they have needed advice they have come to me for it. If ever I have needed a day's shooting for myself or a friend I have gone to them. This continental tour of theirs we discussed and planned out months before-hand. If my misfortune had not come on just when it did I should have gone with them and even up to the last we hoped that I might have been able to have gone to Paris with Phyllis."

Duncombe nodded.

"Tell me about the boy," he said.

His host shrugged his shoulders.

"You know what they're like at that age," he remarked. "He was at Harrow, but he shied at college, and there was no one to insist upon his going. The pair of them had only a firm of lawyers for guardians. He's just a good looking, clean minded, high spirited young fellow, full of beaus and needing the bit every now and then. But, of course, he's no different from the run of young fellows of his age, and if an adventure came his way I suppose he'd see it through."

"And the girl?"

Andrew Pelham rose from his seat.

"I will show you her photograph," he said.

He passed into an inner room divided from the dining room by curtains. In a moment or two he reappeared.

"Here it is," he said and laid a picture upon the table.

Now, Duncombe was a young man who prided himself a little on being unimpressible. He took up a picture with a certain tolerant interest and examined it at first without any special feeling, yet in a moment or two he felt himself grateful for those great disfiguring glasses from behind which his host was temporarily at least blind to all that passed. A curious disturbance seemed to have passed into his blood. He felt his eyes brighten and his breath come a little quicker as he unconsciously created in his imagination the living presentment of the girl whose picture he was still holding. Tall she was and slim, with a soft, white throat and long, graceful neck, eyes rather darker than her complexion warranted, a little narrow, but bright as stars, a mouth with the divine lines of humor and understanding. It was only a picture, but a realization of the living image seemed to be creeping in upon him. He made the excuse of seeking a better light and moved across to a distant lamp. He bent over the picture, but it was not the picture which he saw. He saw the girl herself, and even with the half formed thought he saw her expression change. He saw her eyes lit with sorrow and appeal. He saw her arms outstretched toward him. He seemed even to hear her soft cry.

He knew then what his answer would be to his friend's prayer. He thought no more of the excuses which he had been building in his mind, of all the practical suggestions which he had been prepared to make. Common sense died away within him. The matter of fact man of thirty was ready to tread in the footsteps of his great predecessor and play the modern knight errant with all the whole heartedness of Don Quixote himself. He fancied himself by her side, and his heart leaped with joy of it. He thought no more of abandoned cricket matches and neglected house parties. A finger of fire had been laid upon his somewhat torpid flesh and blood.

"Well?" Andrew asked.

Duncombe returned to the table and laid the picture down with a reluctance which he could scarcely conceal.

"Very nice photograph," he remarked. "Taken locally?"

"I took it myself," Andrew answered. "I used to be rather great at that sort of thing before—before my eyes went dicky."

Duncombe resumed his seat. He helped himself to another glass of wine.

"I presume," he said, "from the fact that you call yourself your nearest friend that the young lady is not engaged?"

"No," Andrew answered slowly, "she is not engaged."

Something a little different in his voice, caught his friend's attention. Duncombe eyed him keenly. He was conscious of a sense of apprehension. He leaned over the table.

"Do you mean, Andrew," he asked hoarsely, "do you mean?"

"Yes, I mean that," his friend answered quietly. "Nice sort of fool, aren't I? I'm twelve years older than she is, I'm only moderately well off and less than moderately good looking; but, after all, I'm only human, and I've seen her grow up from a fresh, charming child into one of God's wonderful women. Even a gardener, you know, George, loves the roses he has planted and watched over. I've taught her a little and helped her a little, and I've watched her cross the borderland."

"Does she know?"

New Name for Knuckles.

In carving a fowl at the dinner table I made the remark that I was not successful in striking the joints. Seven-year-old Frederick, at once asked what were joints, and I explained to him, calling his attention to the knuckles of his hand. His remark was: "I thought they were hinges."

Just One Thing.

"When we sat down to the table," said Mrs. Bette, "I picked up the wine list."

"My!" exclaimed Fanny Foot-licks, "what did he do, drop dead?"

"He never winced," I said. "May I have anything on this?" he said.

"Sure. You'll find it down in the right-hand corner—beer tonics—a bottle."—Philadelphia Press.

WIFE BEARS GLAD NEWS TO JANUARY

CONVICT WEEPS ON HEARING OF CHANCE OF PARDON.

PRESIDENT HELPING HIM

Has Happy Reunion with His Brother Robert, Whom He Had Not Seen for Many Years.

Leavenworth, Kan., May 1.—A dramatic scene was enacted here Tuesday afternoon in the office of the deputy warden of the federal penitentiary when "Mrs. Charles W. Anderson," her five-year-old daughter, and Robert January, of Chillicothe, Mo., a brother of the prisoner, came to pay a visit to William January, alias Anderson, the escaped convict recently recaptured in Kansas City.

The wife carried the glad tidings from Washington of President Roosevelt's note favoring the pardon of the prisoner, in response to the appeals of 40,000 petitioners. Robert January came to renew a family tie that had been broken for years.

Mrs. Anderson, for this is the name under which she was married to January, with her child and Robert January, had started from Kansas City early in the morning to cheer the prisoner. Frail and sad-eyed, she had appeared at the warden's office on her usual stated visit, with no knowledge of the good news in store.

Wife Overcome with Joy. A newspaper man met the little party and read the dispatch from Washington. Instantly light and color lit up the face of the woman, but she was too overcome to give vent to her feelings in words. "I cannot express my feelings of gratitude," she finally said, then hurried to the office of Warden W. R. McClaughry to gain permission for an interview with January.

Before permitting the wife and brother to visit the prisoner, Warden McClaughry warned Mrs. Anderson not to build up her husband's hopes too high. He told her that the president's order was only a preliminary step and that, while he believed the press dispatches containing it were true, he had not yet been officially notified of the action.

Glad News Told the Prisoner.

Mrs. Anderson, the little girl and Robert January were escorted into the deputy warden's office, and soon January was called in. Although the brothers had not met in years, and only the newspaper notoriety of the case had brought the Chillicothe man here to seek his brother, they recognized each other instantly. A tearful, happy greeting ensued, while the wife and child stood by.

Then the wife, nervous and excited as a result of the news from Washington, approached. After they had embraced and January had kissed both wife and child, the woman began cautiously to tell the prisoner of the dispatch.

January had previously been apprised of the great activity in his behalf, but he was not prepared to hear so quickly such important results. Immediately his eyes brightened, he stood erect, and his whole manner changed. He saw himself again in sight of liberty in the midst of his family and surrounded by friends who held him in respect. Again he gave way to tears, but this time tears of joy, and the little group of relatives joined with him, giving way freely to their intense feeling of happiness.

SENSATIONS IN RISK CASE

G. R. SCRUGHAM, MANAGER FOR POLICY HOLDERS, ARRESTED.

He and Two Watchers Accused of Conspiracy—Jacob Frank, Agent, Charged with Forgery.

New York, May 1.—Sensational results have quickly followed the inquiry by the district attorney's office into the recent election of directors of the New York Life Insurance company.

George R. Scrugham, manager of the international policyholders' committee, which inspired the present investigation, making grave charges against those who conducted the election, was himself placed under arrest at Albany Tuesday night and put aboard a train leaving Albany for New York at 1:15 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Scrugham is charged with conspiracy and was the third man identified with the international policyholders' committee to be taken into custody since noon Tuesday. The others are Charles Stirrup and Charles F. Carrington. These were not members of the committee but were employed as watchers from the committee at the election.

They are specifically charged with having "unlawfully conspired together for the perversion and obstruction of the due administration of the laws of the state of New York with relation to the election of directors of the New York Life Insurance company." The warrants were issued on the complaint of Assistant District Attorney Walter B. Howe.

Stirrup, it is alleged, was employed in a subordinate capacity at the office of the policyholders' committee previous to December 13, and the offense with which he is charged was committed prior to that date.

Earlier on Tuesday Jacob Frank, a New York Life Insurance company agent, was arrested charged with forgery in the third degree. Frank had been summoned to explain the signatures of several policyholders to alleged forged ballots cast at the recent election of directors of the New York Life. At the time of his arrest, Frank, it is said, made a statement to Assistant District Attorney's Smyth and Howe that had an important bearing on the later developments.

The policyholders' committee, headed by Scrugham as manager and Samuel Untermyer as counsel, and with a membership of many distinguished persons; in this country and Europe, fought the "administration tickets" in the recent elections of directors of the New York and Mutual Life Insurance companies.

In his complaint Mr. Howe asserts that Scrugham, Stirrup and Carrington used defective ballots, altered and changed them, caused a large number of invalid ballots to be counted and caused the forgery of the names of policy holders and witnesses.

ASSESSORS BEGAN THEIR WORK TODAY

A Special Effort Will Be Made This Time to Get Every Case of Tobacco Leaf on Rolls.

Assessors Charles B. Conrad, Bert L. Gage, David Conger, C. K. Millmore, and James Clough commenced their labors at the city hall this morning and will be occupied in making out the rolls until early in July. A special effort is to be made this year to assess all of the tobacco and the packers are expected to give every case owned or stored by them, as agents in their warehouses. In return for this the assessment will be made very low but if the desired information is withheld, the assessors will fall back on the report of the internal revenue collector. Last year there was a considerable discrepancy between the statements of packers and those made in the revenue report. Personal property will also be subjected to closer scrutiny than heretofore. Furniture, musical instruments, etc., not exceeding $200 in value are exempt and the sum is subtracted from the totals where the possessions are worth more than this amount. Thus, if a man owns a piano and furniture worth $1,000, although $300, he will pay taxes on $700. The citizen is not required to pay taxes on a single bicycle, provided it is not propelled by mechanical agency, nor on a single watch which does not exceed $50 in value.

HAS HOLBROOK MADE BREAK INTO OPERA?

Manager of the Janesville Chautauqua Said to Be Interested in Old Standard Opera Co.

Reference to the reorganization of the Standard Opera company, which appeared in Janesville last October, and part of whose scenery is now stored in the Myers theatre, which appeared in the Gazette of Saturday, last, now appears to be another enterprise of Harry Holbrook, the manager of the Janesville chautauqua. The first announcement made was that the company had been reorganized and that Miss Brown and Cecile DeMille had been dropped from the lists; that Valentine Zimmermann, president of the Mitchell Street state bank, was to be the "angel." The name of the new company was to be the Valbur Standard Opera company. It now appears that Mr. Zimmermann has nothing to do with the enterprise which is in the hands of Harry Holbrook and Edwin L. Barker. The company reports at Oak Park, Mr. Holbrook's home, for rehearsals, August 15th.
